UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO BOULDER

Office of International Education

Bringing CU to the World,
Bringing the World to CU

American and international students mingle at our 2011 international student welcome.

Serving Colorado, Engaged in the World

Since 1959, the Office of International Education has facilitated connections between students and faculty around the world. Every year we send more than 1,200 University of Colorado Boulder students abroad to study in more than 60 countries. We also host over 1,500 international students from more than 80 countries and 600 international faculty and researchers from more than 60 countries. Through international experiences, students and faculty not only discover new knowledge, but also themselves and their place in the world. Study abroad students, international students, and faculty and researchers with international perspective enrich our campus as they share their experiences with others.

Now, in support of the CU-Boulder's Flagship 2030 strategic plan, we are expanding our efforts to make our university a global crossroads. Our goal is to double the number of CU-Boulder students who study abroad and triple the number of international students who study on our campus. We will build on-campus and community traditions that celebrate culture and utilize technology to internationalize the classroom experience.

Campus internationalization, including cultural events, broadens the horizons of the entire campus community.

Strategic Initiatives

Your support for the following initiatives will expand our ability to engage with the world—and promote a university environment in which students forge global connections as they pursue learning opportunities within an international context.

Campus International Center: The Campus International Center in the new Center for Community building serves as our home base. With a lobby meant for gathering, private and public advising space to meet student needs, and natural light flowing throughout, the Center is a welcoming entry point for international students and scholars and an easy-to-find resource for students who would like to study abroad. Your support of the Campus International Center will further signify the importance of global experiences at CU. We are currently seeking naming gifts for various spaces throughout the Center, from meeting rooms, to the lobby, to the Center in its entirety.

Campus Internationalization: International faculty and researchers are frequently looking to join our campus community. They are drawn here by CU-Boulder's world-class reputation, but their interest outpaces our ability to welcome them to campus, as living expenses and housing become barriers time and time again. Your gift can create a fund that would cover some of an international scholar's expenses. Such a fund would allow the Office of International Education to facilitate an international presence on campus that isn't currently possible.

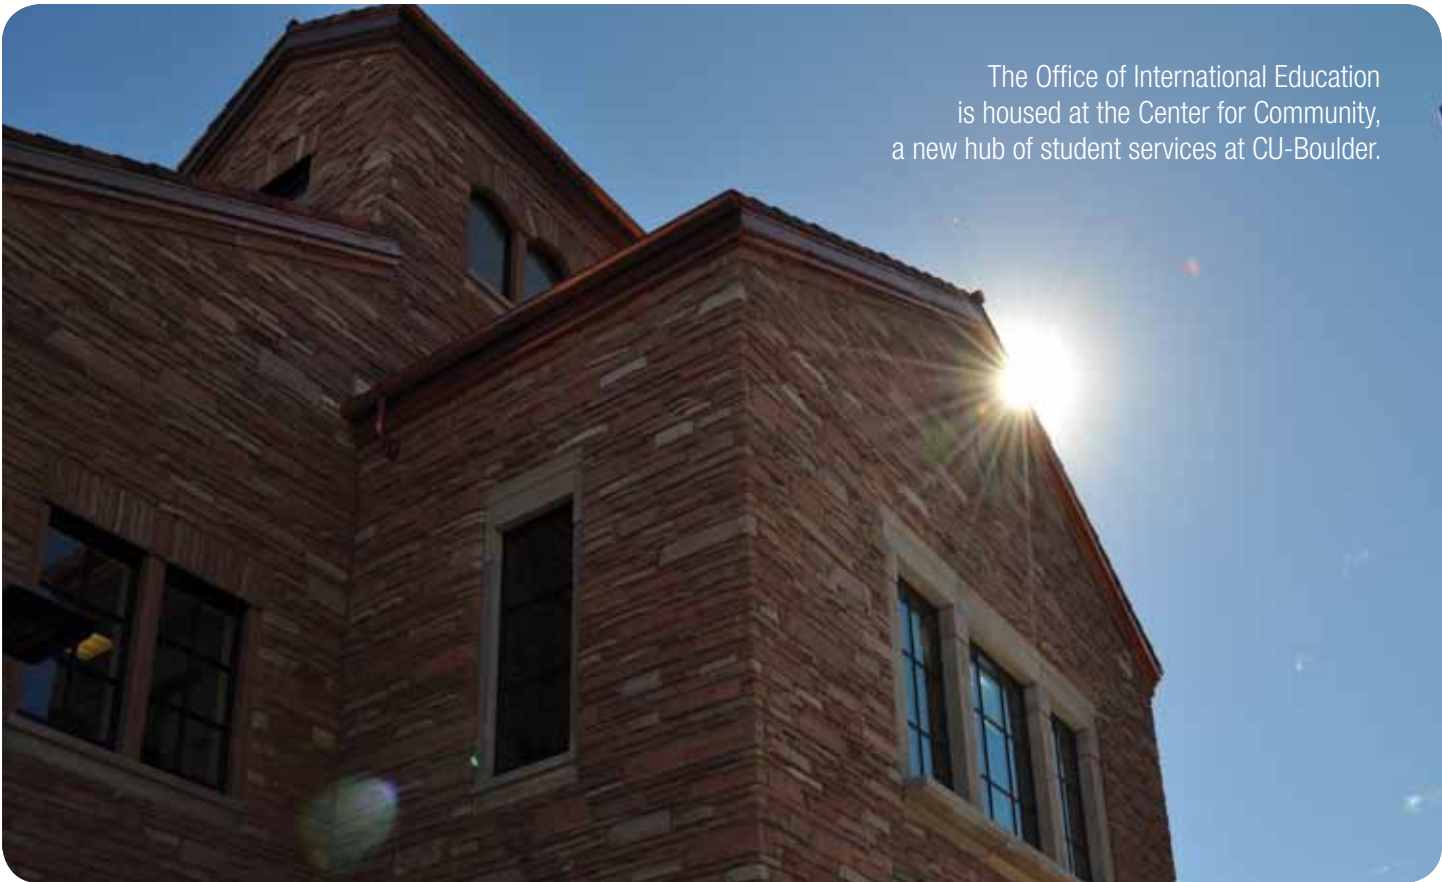

Global CU: We are expanding opportunities to infuse global perspectives into CU-Boulder's education, even for those who never leave the campus. This starts with giving our renowned faculty the opportunity to broaden their horizons and think creatively about the classroom experience. Your support can establish a fund to encourage faculty members to participate in seminars with international institutions. We are also seeking support for a technology purchase that will allow our faculty with international partners to develop co-taught video conference courses.

Scholarships: Scholarships open doors for the best and the brightest—international students who would like to study on our campus as well as CU-Boulder students who want to add an international dimension to their studies. Scholarship gifts make these life-changing experiences possible and enrich our campus by bringing diversity to the classroom and to the overall student learning experience. In particular, support for our faculty-led Global Seminars, service abroad programs, and international students will make an immediate impact in these high-priority areas.

Cultural Programming: CU-Boulder has numerous longstanding cultural traditions and programs that celebrate some of the more than 80 countries our campus population represents. Your gift can underwrite our annual International Festival, weekly international coffee hours, host-family programming through our partnership with Boulder Friends of International Students, or an enrichment fund for international student groups.

Students get a dose of school spirit with Chip at an International Coffee Hour event.

The Office of International Education is housed at the Center for Community, a new hub of student services at CU-Boulder.

Donors Make it Happen!

The world is getting smaller every day. The Office of International Education is CU-Boulder's commitment to ensuring that our students are prepared for that fact, and that our faculty is making a global impact. With your help, we can launch and sustain these initiatives to help CU-Boulder take its place as a global university of the 21st century.
